ABSTRACT

The present paper deals with phytochemical studies in Clitoria Ternatea flower extract. It is commonly known as 'butterfly pea' and "Sangu Pushpam". It is a traditional Ayurvedic medicinal plant belonging to the family Fabaceae. Clitoria Ternatea is found throughout Asia, including locations in South Asia and South East Asia. It has been introduced to Africa, Australia and the Americas. Plant extracts were subjected to phytochemical analysis for screening of medicinal constituents, and identify the presence of various bioactive phytochemicals like Alkaloids, Tannins, Glycosides, Steroids, Saponins, Flavonoids and Phenols. Extracts of butterfly pea flowers can be used conveniently as a natural blue colorant for food products. Anthocyanin is a compound responsible for the deep blue to purple color it is used as a natural colorant, "Clitoria Ternatea" contains various phytochemical compounds and chemical constituents. The most bioactive chemicals are Tannins, Terpenoids, Alkaloids, Glycosides, Carbohydrates, Anthocyanins, Flavonoids and Steroids, Resins, Starch, Taraxenol, Taraxerone, Saponins, Proteins. Current investigation confirms the presence of Tannins, Terpenoids, Alkaloids, Glycosides, Carbohydrates, Anthocyanins, Flavonoids and Steroids and documented the medicinally active constituents.

Keywords: butterfly pea, phytochemical, alkaloids, Flavonoids, anthocyanin

Objective

The main objective of the present project is

- To illustrate the laboratory experiments to study biodiesel Production from castor oil
- To produce ethanol from sugarcane by yeast fermentation technique
- To contact basic transesterification reaction and to optimise the reaction condition for biodiesel production
- The study the efficiency of the produced biodiesel by different chemical analysis
- To learn basic foundation in design research problem and analytical reasoning in conducting chemistry experiments
- To understand the important of literature survey and its role in experimental. design, safety and interpreting results
- To develop the ability to effectively reporting the scientific data in the form of written as well as PowerPoint presentations.
